Dear dad,

I want to bring to your notice an incident which happened recently. If you remember I asked you for money last week saying that I have to buy books. You readily believed me and sent me the money. But in reality I asked that money to give it to my friend from whom I borrowed last month. I spent it on throwing a party to my friends. I was hesitant in asking and somehow managed to get the money from my friend. But he asked me to give it back this week. I had no other choice except to ask you. I was hesitating to tell you the truth as I thought you may get angry at me for using the money in a negligent way. But after I received money from you, I am full of remorse and want to apologize for my misbehavior. It was wrong on my part to tell you a lie and seek the money.

I wholeheartedly convey my apology to you. I hope you will understand my situation. I promise that I will never tell you a lie from now onwards. I value our relationship and hope it will go stronger in the coming years.

Yours lovingly,

Sumanth
